Dear Friend,

I have some important questions for you. Think deeply and carefully as you answer...

How many times have you walked into a room with a very specific task in mind to accomplish in that room... only to then say to yourself... what did I come in here for? You simply could not remember what you were there for. I'll bet that you notice that as you continue traveling through the aging process, this scary phenomenon happens to you more and more frequently... does it worry you?

How many times, when you meet someone new... and then meet them again a few days later and can't remember their name? How embarrassing is that for you, but more important, how scary is that to you?

While you are at home, do you look through the cabinets and refrigerator as you compose a mental list of what you need right before you head out for the supermarket... and then can't even remember all the 10 or 12 items on your mental list when you get there?... what is happening to your memory?

Are you having ever increasing frustrating, and scary, memory problems such as no longer remembering your appointments, phone numbers, addresses, your accounts, do you forget scheduled meetings? In fact, do you even forget what you talked about at your last meeting?

It's so frustrating, isn't it?... but people seem to chalk it all off to the fact that it is an inevitable part of the aging process... that nothing can be done about it... and that your memory will soon be totally gone... what will you ever do? How would you ever cope with that?

Are you finding it absolutely impossible to memorize everything necessary for those new courses that you're taking and trying to study?

Do you suffer from these memory problems? Do you stay up at night worrying that you are losing your memory? Do you find yourself trying to hide this memory loss from others... covering up and pretending that it is not happening? Do you worry that your memory is starting to fail you so often and so fast... that it's only a matter of time before it is totally gone?

That feeling has got to be one of the scariest feelings for a person to have.

The good news is...

That we have your solution.

put up with your poor memory
